ESYNC & Professional Veterinary Products Examine Supply Chain Improvements - Maintaining Customer Service Levels and Improving Inventory Control

Toledo, Ohio, September 20, 2007 – TranSystems | ESYNC, a leading strategic supply chain consulting firm, and Professional Veterinary Products, Ltd. (PVPL) announce supply chain projects targeting enhanced facility layout, tighter inventory control and improved customer service delivery commitments. PVPL, one of the nation's top largest animal health product distributors, is headquartered in Omaha, NE. The first phase of supply chain projects was on-site analysis of operational processes. This was completed in the summer of 2007 and PVPL and ESYNC are currently in the second phase of supply chain improvements and systems requirements.

Jamie Meadows, Vice President of Supply Chain for Professional Veterinary Products, Ltd., says, "We've been working with ESYNC since March and everything has gone very smoothly. As an organization, we've grown so much that needing external supply chain expertise like ESYNC offers is exciting – our business is thriving and we look forward to continued growth with the supply chain improvements we are making now."

TranSystems | ESYNC Principal, John Sidell, says, "PVPL reached a crucial stage in sales growth and market expansion this year and needed to partner with an experienced supply chain consulting firm to help address these challenges. We are very pleased with the partnership with PVPL and are looking forward to deploying the solutions that we have jointly developed."

ABOUT PROFESSIONAL VETERINARY PRODUCTS, LTD.

PVPL is the only animal health products distributor owned by its customers – veterinarians. The company is headquartered in Omaha, NE, with additional distribution centers in York, PA, and Hereford, TX. Since its founding in 1982, PVPL has provided animal health professionals with access to more than 20,000 products from 350 manufacturers. The company offers veterinarians and their staff several unique-to-the-animal-health-industry programs, including inventory management and employee management seminars. In addition to providing participants with the tools and knowledge to run the business side of their practices more efficiently and effectively, the programs have been approved for continuing education credit.
